

BL5218 Directed Studies in Behavioural Ecology (4 MCs)

Behavioural ecology combines ideas from evolution, ecology and behaviour. This course is to expose students to some of the most important and technical advances in the field and provides them an opportunity to develop professional skills in reading, researching, discussing, presenting, and writing about a selection of contemporary topics in behavioural ecology. All the assignments are tailored to student-directed inquiry.